Kanagawa Prefecture is blessed with precious water resources, such as the Sagami River and Sakawa River. However, there are many water pollution accidents in which sewage water containing oil or toxic substances flows into the rivers through drains.

Once such an accident takes place, it may cause serious effects on the ecosystem and the social life. For instance, fish are killed in large numbers, and intake of river water for tap water becomes impossible.

Many of these accidents are caused by erroneous management and operation of facilities at plants and construction sites. In some cases, accidents take place due to discharge of leftover paint and waste oil from households into drains.

If you find white turbidity, fishkill, oil on the surface, or other abnormal conditions in the river, please inform the Environment Division of the Regional Prefectural Administration Center, or the municipal government's environmental section.
